MARKET INSIGHTS

- ✓ With inventory remaining at historic lows, expect to see an increase in contract contingencies for sellers finding replacement properties.
- ✓ Many real estate offices are reporting an increase in number of new and “Coming Soon” listings.
- ✓ Housing inventory is still low. Many brokerages are building private online social groups for their brokers to share information about new and “Coming Soon” listings.
- ✓ Home prices in January usually decrease compared to the spring and summer buying seasons. NerdWallet recently crunched two years of realtor.com® data that reflected the 50 largest U.S. metros. Researchers found that January and February were the top months for those looking to get a bargain. In those months, home sales prices were 8.45 percent lower on average than in June through August. There’s nearly double as many people buying in June than in January.
- ✓ As of January 1, new development in Denver is subject to a fee ranging from $0.40 to $1.70 per square foot. These fees will support the development and preservation of affordable housing.
- ✓ Denver was named one of the top 10 cities where gentrification is happening the fastest. A study pointed to many of the poor and working class neighborhoods, like Globeville and Elyria-Swansea, which are seeing rapid value increases as new development moves in and attracts more well-off residents.

- ✓ Metro Denver population is projected to increase by 56,000 in 2017.
- ✓ According to Housingwire.com, Denver reported the third highest annual gain in home prices in the nation, lagging just behind Seattle and Portland.
- ✓ Lenders have been working hard to get closings back to 30 to 45 days.
- ✓ Rental showings picked up in January. Properties that were sitting on the market during the holiday season into the new year were finally leased.
- ✓ Per the National Association of Homebuilders, 30 percent of the labor utilized in home building comes from immigrants.
- ✓ Fracking seems to be resurfacing as a confusing topic in the minds of relocating buyers looking for acreage properties. Relocating buyers with this concern are avoiding northern counties altogether.
- ✓ Rising prices, rates and rents, along with low inventory, will make a trusted REALTOR® even more important for buyers.

Quick Stats:

- 2017 represents a new record-low for January with 3,989 listings beating 2015’s 4,171
- Average Active Listings for January is 13,800 (1985-2017)
- Record-high January was 2008 with 24,550 listings

EXPERT OPINION

STEVE DANYLIW

Chairman of the DMAR
 Market Trends Committee

In last month's report, we reflected upon the historic and robust 2016 housing market. With 2016 in our rearview mirror, we now can look ahead to see what will drive our market in 2017. Low housing inventory has been a key driver for over two years, and I don't see that changing any time soon. Historically, inventory follows a seasonal pattern. We see the bottom in January to February, then peaking in late August to September. Another driver is mortgage interest rates. All predictions indicate a steady rise in interest rates throughout 2017. This could compel buyers who are sitting on the sideline to get into the big game. This - combined with mild temperatures - could cause our spring selling season to start early. I've seen forecasted estimates on housing appreciation ranging from 4.5 percent to 10 percent. I think 2017 will hit somewhere in the middle of those numbers.

Active listings in the residential market (single family and condos) decreased slightly by 6.5 percent to 3,989 total units in January, while the number of sold listings decreased by 33.21 percent compared to the previous month. These decreases are normal for this time of the year. 3,989 active listings did represent an all-time low for any January and only the second-time active listing have dropped below 4,000. Even though total inventory was down, condo inventory was up 15.8 percent year-over-year with single-family inventory down 10.95 percent. Not a good start for buyers. As we look at the single-family home market, the average sold price rose 3.86 percent to $448,374, while the median price remained relatively unchanged at $380,000. Year-over-year, we've seen 9.25 percent and 9.99 percent increases in the average and median sales prices, respectively. The condo market showed 34.05 percent fewer sales than the previous month, while the average and median sales prices dropped to $288,962 and $242,500, respectively. Year-over-year condo sales prices showed impressive gains, an increase in the average price by 6.83 percent and median price by 12.79 percent. Sellers are thrilled by the price appreciation and buyers are frustrated by the low inventory.

What does average look like? Of the homes that sold in January 2017 the average detached single-family home was 1,867 square feet, four bedrooms, and three bathrooms, spent 47 days on market, and was built in 1980. The average attached single-family home/condo was 1,215 square feet, two bedrooms, and two bathrooms, spent 36 days on market, and was built in 1986.

Final Tidbits: If you're a real estate agent working with a buyer under the $400,000 price point, consider yourself lucky. Yes, I said lucky. You have a front row seat to a real estate feeding frenzy. I recently showed a property in Thornton at 5:30 p.m. on a week-night. I was there with six other real estate agents and their clients. Also in Thornton, I wrote an offer on a property listed at $300,000 only to find out that my client's offer was one of 17, with all of the offers over list price. Managing your clients' expectations is critical in this fast-paced market. What are you seeing in the market? Weigh-in via social media using #dmarstats.

EXPERT OPINIONS

“Luxury Market: The temperature continued to drop in the Luxury Market in January, as many agents who specialize in homes priced over $1,000,000 reported few to no showings over the past two months. Sales of high end single-family homes dropped 15.96 percent from December to January and December was down nearly 27 percent from the month prior. No reason to send out a winter storm warning yet though. The Luxury Market is still starting off warmer this year than any January in the past four years. The temperature drop in the Luxury Condo (attached home) Market was like Colorado weather. We saw January sales down 43.75 percent from December, but December sales were 150 percent higher than November - warm one day, cold the next. But no reason to worry if the fire is out, January 2017's Luxury Condo Market sales were double the number of sales we had at the same time in 2014, and sales were smoking compared to the first month of 2013, 2014, and 2015. The high-end segment of the market is still the only place where buyers have more control than sellers. In fact, buyers in the suburbs have a lot of choices, but the very popular central Denver neighborhoods are as tight for million dollar and up homes as they are for other price ranges. - Jill Schafer, DMAR Market Trends Committee member and Denver real estate agent

Signature Market: Buyers may have still been in holiday mode, thinking about the election, or just hibernating as there were not many sales happening in the single-family Signature Market in January. We saw sales down 30.33 percent from December. Out of the sales we did see, 21 percent were new construction homes built between 2016 and 2017. Condo buyers seemed to have been more interested in hopping on the Winter Park Ski Train and hitting the slopes than buying a condo with sales were down 73.33 percent from December 2016. With the lower temperatures in January came lower list prices too for the residential Signature Market (single family and condo). January sales to list price was 93 percent. That was down 2.21 percent from December. For sellers to get the most out of this still predominantly hot market, they'll need to price their properties at, or slightly below, true market value to ensure the property doesn't sit on the market and become a stale listing. Our months of inventory is growing and we have more coming online in the Signature Market. There is 5.46 months of inventory in the single-family Signature Market and 11.13 months of inventory for condos in the Signature Market. Price it right the first time! - Brigitte Modglin, DMAR Market Trends Committee member and Denver real estate agent

Premier Market: Some species may hibernate in winter, but buyers and sellers in the $500,000 to $750,000 price bracket took to January with the enthusiasm of qualifiers at the X Games. Compared to last January there were 28.43 percent more sales. The average price (single family, condo and residential) was down just a dusting, under one-half percent and for condos down 1.73 percent. The notable statistic is price per square foot: up, up and up, almost seven percent over all. This is a number we will watch, as it may be indicative of shifting preference in style and size of homes. Or, perhaps just showing that what is available is limited and buyers are taking what they can get while rates are low. Strap on your GoPro and enjoy the ride! - Elaine Stucky, DMAR Market Trends Committee member and Denver real estate agent

GLOSSARY

Active Listings: The number of properties available for sale at the end of the reported period. The availability of homes for sale has a big effect on supply-demand dynamics and home prices.

New Listings: The number of properties which became available during the reported period.

Under Contract: The number of listings that were changed status from Active to Under Contract at the end of the reported period. Under Contract listings are counted at the end of the reported period. Each listing can only be counted one time. If a listing goes into Under Contract, out of Under Contract, then back into Under Contract all in one reported period, the listing would only be counted once. This is the most real-time measure possible for home buyer activity, as it measures signed contracts on sales rather than the actual closed sale. As such, it is called a “leading indicator” of buyer demand.

Days on Market (DOM): A measure of how long it takes a given property to sell, on average.

Sold Listings: A measure of home sales that sold and closed during the reported period.

Average Sales Price: A sum of all home sales prices divided by the total number of sales. Not considered the most accurate gauge since data from the high-end can easily skew the results.

Median Sales Price: A measure of home values in a market area where 50% of activity was higher and 50 percent was lower than this price point. This method is preferred because it's more insulated from outlying activity occurring at either tail end of the market.

Months Supply of Inventory (MOI): A measure of how balanced the market is between buyers and sellers. It is expressed as the number of months it would hypothetically take to sell through all the available homes for sale currently, given current levels of home sales. A balanced market ranges from 4 to 6 months of supply. A buyer's market has a higher number, reflecting fewer buyers relative to homes for sale. A seller's market has a lower number, reflecting more buyers relative to homes for sale.

Residential (RES): Represents the overall housing market which includes activity of Single Family Homes as well as Condos.

Single Family (Detached Homes): Activity of Detached Single Family Homes.

Condo (Attached Homes): Activity of Attached Condos & Townhomes.

Premier Market: Properties priced between $500,000 and $749,999.

Signature Market: Properties priced between $750,000 and $999,999.

Luxury Market: Properties priced at $1,000,000+ ($1M+).
